Creating Culturally Responsive Leaders

EOP DIRECTOR DEBRIEF

After the training video ends, lead your participants through the following exercise “The Power of Story”. Remind them to complete the online workshop survey (https://bit.ly/SUNYEOPCRLleaders)!

Facilitator notes

Learning Goal: Tee up participants to reflect on everything they learned and what resonated with them during the session to catapult them into action. In this exercise they are encouraged to share concrete choices they are making to uplift the most marginalized communities in their areas.

In this final exercise, you want the participants to write a headline and the first paragraph (No more than 2 sentences) of an article that describes how their work as a professional focused on inclusion.

Total Activity Time: (15 min)

-Exercise: The Power of Story
  - Imagine it is 2025, and you have graduated from college.

  - A local media outlet is doing a story about how college students from your graduating class are impacting their community, especially as it relates to racial and economic injustices.

  - The paper wants to feature you. How are you applying what you’ve learned about inclusivity as a professional in your work? How are you contributing to creating positive change as a leader?

  - What would be the main headline of your article?

Time: 5 minutes to write the headline; 7 minutes for large group debrief

Concluding Question: (3 minutes)

In thinking about what we have learned thus far in this session, how do you envision yourself as a student leader?

- Take note of any themes that stand out in what the participants share and recap with group.
