Upcoming Event

Jun 19

Book of Lists Party

Time: 5:30 pm - 7:30 pm

Place: Sixty State Place

See all events

Jun 5, 2014, 12:50pm EDT

Schenectady County Community College approved for two Startup-NY sites
Schenectady County Community College received state approval for two tax-exempt locations under Gov. Andrew Cuomo's Start-Up New York program.

The two locations are the Kindl Building at 201 State St. and the NYBizLab at 251 State St, both are located in downtown Schenectady.

The governor's Start-Up New York initiative seeks to convince more businesses to expand or establish new operations on or near college campuses in exchange for 10 years of tax exemptions.

"Start-Up New York at SCCC will help provide yet another opportunity for the college to contribute to economic development in Schenectady County while providing our students with internships, co-ops and job placements with the partnering businesses," said Denise Murphy-McGraw, chair of the college's Board of Trustees.

The school is now eligible to submit applications to the State University of New York and Empire State Development to bring businesses and jobs to the area.

Schenectady County Community College will focus on attracting businesses that align with its technology programs in nanoscale materials technology, alternative energy, battery technology, public safety, supply chain management, computer networking systems and cyber security.

Krystle covers breaking news

Related links:

Economic Snapshot, Economic Development, Jobs, Policy

Industries:

Banking & Financial Services, Human Resources, Technology, Education

Promoted by Taboola